On its face, this game appears to be just another hex-based wargame set in the second world war. But, what makes this game possibly the most brilliant in its genre is its political decision system. You are just one part of a chain of command, going up to either Hitler or Stalin (depending on which side you play), and must deal with your subordinates, make requests of your superiors, and make decisions that will make or break your ability to wage war.in addition to actually commanding your armies! This gives a streamlined but clever look into army organization in the second world war and some of the difficulties it may create/exacerbate in the face of a military campaign.. I played the Russians and had no rain till november (Turn 35). No replacements from turn 20 to 30 , then two divisions from 30 - 32, then nothing again till turn 40. The German AI also seemed to ignore any penalties for being out of command range. I am not sure what this was supposed to be a simulation of, but it certainly was nothing like the russian experience of the Great Patriotic war. It was the war hitler dreamed off though, so the AI had a breaze.. Game is okay. AI will never play by the same rules, so game will be challenging in a good and bad way. Also some things can only be learned by trial and error, as game feedback often if very lacking. Still, if you like hex strategies, pick this one up and play around for some 40-60 hours..
